Some have wrongly concluded that if God is absolutely sovereign, then man does not have a free will. It is thought that man can only act inasmuch as God will allow him to act, and that man must act only as God desires. Therefore, according to this view, man cannot resist the sovereign will and desires of God. Scripture emphasizes, however, that God has sovereignly granted to man the ability to make free choices. This is not man usurping God's role in the world, but is God's sovereign design and purpose for man in the world. Man could not make free choices except that it was given by God. God exercises sovereign control in the world; but within this control, He permits certain events and purposes others. It is of great importance to carefully distinguish between these two aspects of God's sovereignty. For this reason, the sinful consequences of man's will must never be attributed to God. The Word of God clearly states that all sinful temptations, the acts of the flesh, wars, lust, killings, and the misery that results because of sin are not caused by God, but by the free choices of man (James 4:1). The Word of God carefully sets forth both the infinite sovereignty of God and human responsibility. God is sovereign, and yet in this infinite sovereignty, God has granted to man a free will. To detract from either of these truths is to detract from the fullness of the Word of God. - David Dunlap
